

Community Benefit

Summary

In addition to the positive economic impacts of the development during construction and operations, EDP Renewables is committed to developing a significant community benefit package which could be worth in excess of £2million over the lifetime of the wind farm, dependent on the ultimate capacity of the development.

Good Practice Principles

Our work to develop more detailed proposals for the community benefit arrangements will be guided by the Scottish Government's Good Practice Principles for Community Benefit. Our starting point will be to engage with existing community companies and charities to gather their views on the appropriate area of benefit, management structures and local priorities. We will then develop initial proposals and consult on these in due course, though we would welcome views at any time on how the community benefit arrangements could be structured and how these could be focused at any time in the development of the project.
